The soldiers themselves did not know how bad they were being treated until the war investigating committee made their report.

France has thrown up the sponge in the Fashoda business, and acknowledged that she had no claim. The English are jubilant.

A battalion of negro troops returning from the jubilee at Philadelphia, forcibly held the train at Knoxville Tenn. until their officers could take in the town.

The American volunteer regiments now doing garrison duties in Manila and Cuba, are getting anxious to come home. They volunteered to fight and not to assume the duties of the regular army.

From the top of Mount Zion, the former home of the Virgin Mary, in the Holy Land of Jerusalem, the appeal has rung out "Peace on Earth" and from continent to continent one continuous echo answers, "Amen".

The election in North Carolina promises to be an interesting one. The democrats are determined to have fair play or fight, and the republicans seem equally determined to produce a clash, by encouraging the negroes to run for office.

E. R. Gunby the republican candidate for Congress from this district, referring to Joe Lee's appointment as collector of customs for Jacksonville, remarked, "The President had a right to appoint whom he pleased, and that it was none of the business of the democrats what the President did." It is true that the appointment was not directly the business of the democrats but the position to which Lee was appointed is very closely connected with the business of Florida democrats, and the Republican party will not benefit by the result.
